Football game to honor alleged Hernandez murder victim

The Boston Bandits will play the Merrimack Valley Pride Friday in Roxbury in honor of fallen teammate Odin Lloyd, who prosecutors allege was murdered by former New England Patriots tight end Aaron Hernandez.

Little voter increase ahead of mayoral election preliminary

Officials at Boston City Hall haven't seen many new voter registrations in the weeks leading up to this month's preliminary municipal elections, but are bracing for a possible blitz of new voters generated by mayoral hopefuls looking for an advantage in a crowded 12-person field.

The deadline to register to vote in the Sept. 24 preliminary is tonight at 8 p.m. SHNS

MIT students design ring to replace T cards

Open Sesame. The Sesame Ring lets customers slide seamlessly into the system without a card.

You've lived it a hundred times: The train is barreling into the station, but you can't find your CharlieCard in time. Sure enough, it appears after a minute or two of fumbling through your purse or pockets, but at that point, you're already late, you're cranky and you've probably spilled some coffee.

Scenarios like this inspired the creators of The Sesame Ring to design the waterproof, 3D-printed ring that lets people enter MBTA stations with a fist bump at the fare gate.

"It looks like magic, hence the name," said 24-year-old Chris Benson, an MIT doctoral student who advised creators Olivia Seow, 22, and Edward Tiong, 23, both engineering and design undergrads.

The trio has blown past their Kickstarter goal of $5,000. As of yesterday, 600 people had pledged $14,307 well before their Sept. 14 deadline. For $20, donors get the signature ring. Personalized rings are offered for higher pledges.

The team met with MBTA officials this summer to discuss the project. Although they technically don't need the T's approval, Tiong said they were pleased to get positive feedback.

"It was very surprising; they were really open about this project from the start," Benson said.

Seow said the ring appeals not only to "technology geeks," but to anyone who has ever relied on public transportation. "It's fun to see people brought together by this common frustration. Everyone seems intrigued by this idea," she says.

Put a ring on it

The Sesame Ring opens the door — literally — for innovation.

- Developers said they will explore the possibility of creating wearable technology for a multitude of daily activities. It is technically feasible, they said, that a device, like a ring, key chain or bracelet, could let users gain entry to their work building, dorm or Hubway account.

Use of force

North Attleboro police will review officers' actions

North Attleboro police said they will review the actions of officers who were shown on video hitting a man with their batons while trying to arrest him over the weekend.

The video, which was posted on YouTube and has since been removed, was taken of a portion of an incident that took place on Sunday, North Attleboro police said.

The incident is under review.
NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

"We are aware that the end of the incident was captured on video. As we do with every use-of-force incident, all information is being thoroughly reviewed," police said.

Officers were called by a woman who said her ex-boyfriend was strangling her and trying to prevent her from calling police.

Officers arrived to find the man outside the ex-girlfriend's home and he taunted them, police said.

"The man, who was much larger than either of the officers, responded by laughing and telling them, 'There are just two of you? You better call for backup,'" police said in a statement. MICHAEL NAUGHTON

C's Sullinger embarrassed after arrest

Boston Celtics forward Jared Sullinger pleaded not guilty yesterday to allegedly assaulting his girlfriend during a domestic incident at a Waltham home over the holiday weekend.

In a statement released through the Celtics yesterday afternoon, Sullinger said he was embarrassed and humbled.

"I voluntarily reported to the Waltham police [Tuesday] morning to respond to charges against me. The experience was humbling and embarrassing for me. Yet I know that this situation has brought both sorrow and embarrassment to my girlfriend, my family, the Boston Celtics organization, my teammates and my fans. To all of you, I apologize from the bottom of my heart. My lawyers have advised me not to discuss the case at this time. But I wanted to immediately and publicly apologize to everyone affected by this situation," Sullinger said.

Sullinger pleaded not guilty in Waltham District Court to assault and battery, malicious destruction of property and intimidating a witness. He was ordered held on $5,000 cash bail and was ordered to have no contact with his girlfriend unless there was a third person of her choosing present.

Waltham police said officers were called to a home just before 8 p.m. Saturday for a report of a domestic incident.

Sullinger, 21, played in 45 games for the Celtics last season, his first year as a professional basketball player. The 6-foot-9, 260-pound power forward came to the Celtics from Ohio State University.

- The Celtics also released a statement on the arrest yesterday afternoon.
- "The Celtics were disappointed to learn of the allegations against Jared and are currently gathering more information on the situation, which we are taking very seriously. We will reserve further comment until such point that we have sufficient additional information," the statement said.

Athlete attack. Soccer player from Somerville pleads not guilty to rape

A Somerville High School soccer player was ordered held on high bail yesterday after pleading not guilty to charges that he raped and assaulted other students during a school retreat last month.

Galileo Mondol, 17, was ordered held on $100,000 cash bail during his arraignment in a Pittsfield court, according to the Berkshire district attorney's office.

He faced charges including aggravated rape of a child under 16, assault and battery and witness intimidation.

Mondol, and two other 16-year-old junior varsity players who were not identified because of their age, are accused of assaulting freshman players during an Aug. 25 retreat that Somerville High School hosted for student-athletes at Camp Lenox in Otis.

Authorities said Mondol and the two 16-year-olds, who are all juniors, entered a cabin occupied by freshmen students and assaulted three victims.

Prosecutors said the 16-year-olds used a broomstick to rape one of the freshmen while Mondol watched, according to the Globe. Two other freshmen were assaulted, but were able to fight off the rest of the attack.

School and city officials promised a review of the assault, which they said was an isolated incident.

In a joint statement released over the weekend, Somerville Mayor Joseph Curtatone and Superintendent Tony Pierantozzi called the incident disturbing.

"We are disturbed and appalled that these crimes may have taken place and our thoughts and concerns are with the victims and their families," they said in the statement.

Mondol is scheduled to appear in court again on Friday for a dangerousness hearing.

Top Republicans back strike

Leaving. After two and a half years of war, nearly one Syrian in three has been driven from home.

Syrian refugees arrive in Turkey at the Cilvegozu crossing gate of Reyhanli, in Hatay. / GETTY IMAGES

President Barack Obama won the backing of two top Republicans in Congress in his call for limited U.S. strikes on Syria to punish President Bashar al-Assad for his suspected use of chemical weapons.

Speaking after the United Nations said 2 million Syrians had fled a conflict that posed the greatest threat to world peace since the Vietnam War, Obama said the United States also has a broader plan to help rebels defeat Assad's forces.

In remarks that appeared to question the legality of U.S. plans to strike Syria without U.N. backing, U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon said the use of force is only legal when it is in self-defense or with U.N. Security Council authorization.

He said that if U.N. inspectors confirm the use of chemical weapons in Syria, the Security Council, which has long been deadlocked on the Syrian civil war, should overcome its differences and take action.

Obama met congressional leaders at the White House yesterday to urge a prompt decision and assure them that it did not mean another long war. REUTERS

UN's ban casts doubt on legality of US plans to punish Syria

In addition to U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon seemingly questioning the legality of the United States' plans to strike Syria without U.N. backing, he also suggested that a U.S. attack could lead to further turmoil in conflict-ravaged Syria, where the United Nations says more than 100,000 people have been killed in the country's nearly three years of civil war. REUTERS

$7.2B. Microsoft buys up Nokia's handset business after struggling in market

Two years after hitching its fate to Microsoft's Windows Phone software, Nokia collapsed into the arms of the U.S. software giant yesterday, agreeing to sell its main handset business for $7.2 billion.

Nokia, once the world's dominant handset maker, has failed to close a yawning lead opened up by Apple and Samsung in the highly competitive market for smartphones and will now concentrate on its networking equipment unit, navigation business and technology patents.

Nokia's boss Stephen Elop, who ran Microsoft's business software division before jumping to Nokia in 2010, will return to the firm as head of its mobile devices business. REUTERS

New iPhone expected as Apple asks media to event

Apple will host a special event at its Cupertino, Calif., headquarters on Sept. 10. / GETTY IMAGES

Cost. The new phone will be offered in a cheaper plastic casing at a lower price.

Apple, Inc. yesterday sent official invitations to a Sept. 10 event where it is expected to unveil the latest version of the iPhone, possibly in colors other than its trademark black and white.

"This should brighten everyone's day," the cryptic invitation read, under a graphic depicting pastel-colored circles around a white Apple logo.

The company, which is making a focused effort to win over consumers in Asia where rivals Samsung Electronics and other Android manufacturers dominate, said in the invitation it will host a breakfast and presentation at its Cupertino, Calif., headquarters.

The company did not specify what the presentation will be about, but supply chain sources told Reuters in June that Apple is expected to launch two new models this year with new fingerprint technology as well as a cheaper version in plastic casing.

Apple plans to dress up the phone in five or six colors to differentiate it from the more expensive model that has traditionally come only in black and white, the sources said.

Analysts say the company needs a cheaper phone to drive faster growth in markets like China. REUTERS

Florida family finds $300,000 worth of sunken treasure

Quality time. A family who treasure hunts together gets rich together.

A Florida family struck it rich over the weekend, hauling up an estimated $300,000 worth of gold from a historic wreckage in the Atlantic Ocean.

"What's really neat about them is they are a family, they spend family time together out there and the most amazing part about them is they always believed this day would come," said Brent Brisben, whose company 1715 Fleet – Queens Jewels LLC owns the rights to the wreckage.

Brisben said Rick and Lisa Schmitt, and their grown children Hillary and Eric, found gold chains and coins from the wreckage of a convoy of 11 ships that went down in a hurricane off the coast of Florida in 1715 en route from Havana to Spain.

The ships' manifests indicate that about $400 million worth of treasure was on board, of which $175 million has been recovered, Brisben said.

His company bought the rights to the wreck site from the heirs of legendary treasure hunter Mel Fisher in 2010 and allows others, including the Schmitts, to search under subcontracting agreements.

Brisben said the Schmitts, who live in Sanford, Fla., have been searching for treasure for years. Eric Schmitt, who made the latest haul, also found a silver platter worth about $25,000 in 2002 when he was a high school sophomore.

Under U.S. and Florida law, the treasure will be placed into the custody of the U.S. District Court in South Florida. The state of Florida will be allowed to take possession of up to 20 percent of the find for display in a state museum. The remainder will be split evenly between Brisben's company and the Schmitt family, he said. REUTERS

Brisben said the story of the 1715 wreckage was used as a basis for the 1977 film "The Deep" and for the 2008 film "Fool's Gold."

Two firefighters injured in Atlanta airport escalator fire

An escalator caught fire in a concourse at Atlanta's Hartsfield-Jackson International Airport yesterday, injuring two firefighters and forcing passengers to be rerouted to other areas.

The fire at the world's busiest airport started at about 5:30 a.m. on an escalator in Concourse T, said Janet Ward, a spokeswoman for the Atlanta Fire Department.

"Passengers were briefly rerouted to other concourses because of heavy smoke," she said. "The fire was quickly extinguished."

An airport spokeswoman said there were no major flight delays due to the fire at the airport, which serves more than 95 million passengers a year.

The injured firefighters were treated on the scene, Ward said. REUTERS

Johansson supports Hillary Clinton in 2016

Actress Scarlett Johansson was spotted on the red carpet for her new film, "Under The Skin," on Tuesday at the 70th Venice International Film Festival. In a recent interview with the U.K. edition of Harper's Bazaar, the actress proclaimed her love for Hillary Clinton. "I think Hillary Clinton would make a wonderful president," Johansson says. "I think we could only benefit from having someone in office who has been a mother. Women have a different perspective and appreciation of humanity because of that maternal instinct. It can only be a step forward."

Me and Robin the whole time said, 'You know we're about to make history right now," she said in a video clip. "What's amazing is I think now, we're three days later and people are still talking about it. They're overthinking it. You're thinking about it more than I thought about it when I did it."

Actually, Panettiere does not live with regrets

Hayden Panettiere is apparently having a hard time following her own advice, at least where body art is concerned. Recent paparazzi photos of the 24-year-old actress seem to reveal that she's in the process of having a tattoo removed from her back that reads, "live without regrets" in Italian. The tattoo runs down the left side of her back and includes a spelling error. So, she doesn't take her own tattoo's advice — whatever it might actually mean.

MARK DUPLASS

"The League" actor talks about the joys of playing a remorseless jerk.

I DON'T WANNA GROW UP

GETTY IMAGES

To some, Mark Duplass is a filmmaker specializing in small dramedies like "The Puffy Chair," "Cyrus" and "Jeff, Who Lives at Home." To others, he's an actor who plays soulful slacker types in "Humpday," "Your Sister's Sister" and "Safety Not Guaranteed." But to most, arguably, he's Pete, the dude-ish fantasy football addict on "The League." Though it enters its fifth season tonight, Duplass says his character hasn't changed much — which is good.

How do you feel Pete has evolved over the seasons?
Here's the greatest thing about Pete and this show: Pete does not grow up. Every man-child movie or anything you watch, over the course of 90 minutes they learn their lessons and become good people. Pete's kind of a terrible human being. He's super shallow. He's very into fantasy football because he doesn't have very much else going on in his life.

Do you think he'll ever change?
I think Pete's got a shot at beginning self-awareness around 75. But I wouldn't bet on it.

Are there any similarities between you and Pete?
No, I'm so different from him. He has this confidence — even if he doesn't work hard, he knows he's going to be fine in the world. I'm deathly afraid of failure and am pretty neurotic and I'm a workaholic because of that.

The cast mainly comprises comedic actors, but you and your wife (and co-star), Katie Aselton, come from movies.
The films that we've done are dramedies, so we have an appreciation for comedy. You just have to take ego out of it, and make sure you're not trying to be the funniest one in the scene all the time. You're just trying to make the funniest scene you can.

Duplass, on his character on "The League."

Bonus question

As an actor, what are the challenges of doing TV versus film and hanging on to the same character?
"The League" is a bit like summer camp. I get to show up and just be an actor and improvise and have fun. The real challenge is trying to stay creatively relevant and creatively inspired. The thing that helps most is it's an improvised show...so you can never get to that lazy space where you just memorize lines and spit them out.

MORGAN SPURLOCK

THIS IS HIM

Documentary filmmaker Morgan Spurlock has taken on plenty of behemoths, from fast food ("Super Size Me") to terrorism ("Where in the World is Osama bin Laden?"). Now he turns his cameras on the reigning kings of pop music, One Direction. But with a band that was formed on reality TV, how much more is there to reveal? Apparently, plenty.

How do you approach telling the origin story of one of the most well-documented groups in history?

The thing for me coming into it was to do it as quickly and as cohesively as possible. It's a very quick part of the film. That whole story probably isn't more than five to seven minutes of the actual movie. I just wanted to take you on the ride so you can get a sense of coming into their lives, understand what it's really like to be a part of One Direction.

As you show in the film, these guys really have trouble going anywhere.

The minute they walk out of their hotel, they get off a plane, there's always people there waiting. They have been blown up through social media — I mean, the fans have really taken ownership of this band — to the point that every time they go anywhere, it's literally shared out and broadcast on Twitter.

Quoted

"I just wanted to take you on the ride with this group so you can get a sense of coming into their lives, understand what it's really like to be a part of One Direction." Spurlock

Speaking of Twitter, having pop idols isn't necessarily new. But it seems that without Twitter, their meteoric rise couldn't have happened as fast.

I don't think it would've happened as fast. I think Twitter played a huge part in exploding the band throughout the U.K. first, taking them to Europe. People all over the world heard about them and knew about them before they even had their first record out. So this whole idea of sharing that information was incredible, and part of that is the reason that I think the fans are so dedicated to them and so passionate. It's like having stock in a company. These people feel invested in this band.

On boy band envy

Do you envision the Backstreet Boys or New Kids on the Block shaking their fists and saying, "If only!"

"Damn you, Twitter! How could you have come so late?" Those guys didn't seem like they were hurting too much. They should be more upset about the way that their managers roped them into bad deals and massive ownership of the band.

Orchard Hill Condominiums feature 10-foot ceilings and in-unit laundry. / RE/MAX LUXURY LIVING

The condo comes with a terrace too! / RE/MAX LUXURY LIVING

Park yourself right here

For sale. This Charlestown condo comes with a rare amenity: parking.

There's one thing that most Charlestown residents and visitors agree upon: Parking in Chucktown is horrendous. One can drive around in circles for what feels like hours in search of a spot, an accepted annoyance that makes one home for sale at Orchard Hill Condominiums particularly unusual — and desirable. Not only does the condo have two parking spots (one garage and one open), but it has two guest parking spaces, as well.

"It's almost unheard of," says the condo's listing agent Candice Macoul. This Charlestown resident, who doesn't have a parking spot to call her own, speaks from bitter daily experience. "We all rush home from work trying to get a spot. To have guest parking too, this is very rare," she adds.

Orchard Hill Condominiums is a 26-unit building at the top of Bunker Hill Street. It was built in the late 1800s as a school house and converted into homes in the mid-1990s.

"It was St. Francis de Sales school, it's opposite St. Francis de Sales church," Macoul says. "It's on the historic register, so the exterior was carefully renovated with the original features. Also, Orchard Hill sits at the highest point in the whole of the city of Boston," Macoul adds. "It has beautiful views. This home is at the back of the building, which is quieter and it has such beautiful light."

The property's location is rife with historic neighborhood features — it sits near the site of the Battle of Bunker Hill (which, though a Pyrrhic victory for the British, set the stage for the American Revolution) and is also just steps from nearby Doherty Playground.

"This is the last park that Olmsted created," Macoul says. (That would be Frederick Law Olmsted, architect of Boston's Emerald Necklace and New York's Central Park.) "And the building is called Orchard Hill because it was once the site of an apple orchard."

Rich history and parking to spare? We're sold.

Is Title Insurance a Waste of Money?

By Attorney George Warshaw

I never met anyone who likes paying for title insurance.

"Why do I need it? Isn't it a scam? Didn't an attorney do a title search? The house has been there for a hundred years!"

Most attorneys hire professional search companies to conduct a registry document examination.

The attorney then receives the results: i.e. a stack of documents anywhere from 30 pages to more than a hundred, with the examiner's notes and a summary. The attorney then (hopefully) reviews the stack of title documents for problems.

Title examination is a pressure business. Deadlines have to be met, but when it's busy in real estate, everyone is busy.

And just as some title examiners are better than others, some lawyers are better or more experienced than others.

Mistakes happen.

Insurance is about risk. People buy insurance to manage their risk. Title insurance is no different.

I don't like paying for it because I expect the title examiner and attorney to do a proper job. I also expect I'll never run over my dog or burn my house down when I forget to turn off the kettle.

In the end, I still buy it when I buy property because I don't want to find out there's an uninsured problem when I want to sell my property and can't. © 2013 George Warshaw.

Your fall home checklist

Advice. Angie's List has your guide to prepping for colder weather.

Labor Day, our last barbecue-filled beach day and the final hurrah for summer, is over. Now, it's time to focus on shopping for our warmer clothes and prepping the house for fall. Angie's List gives us the tasks to get out of the way while the weather is still mild so that we can cozy up to our fave Cab Sav stress-free later.

Service your heating system

As much as 80 percent of emergency calls answered by heating specialists are the result of improper maintenance. Schedule an appointment soon so you can beat the rush and help avoid a breakdown in the middle of a freeze.

Check and replace filters

Fall is the perfect time to check your furnace filters. Efficient operation distributes heat better and cuts your energy costs. Plus, it's an inexpensive and easy task.

Protect your pipes

Have your plumbing looked at and water lines insulated. Cleaning all lines can help remove clogs. Clogs cause backups, which can freeze, then cause the weakening of pipes and bursting. Wrap your pipes with insulation designed for plumbing to protect them.

Add insulation

This is one of the lowest-cost options for improving the energy efficiency of your home. The proper amount of insulation you should have depends on the climate you live in. Obviously, the colder the weather, the more you need. Look in your attic: If you see exposed two-by-fours, you are due for more insulation.

Cold weather tip

Drain water from your water heater

You can improve your water heater's efficiency by 50 percent by draining sediment buildup from the holding tank.

Seal drafts

Caulk, seal and weather-strip where drafts are detected. Walk through your home with a lit stick of incense or a candle. Drafts will pull the smoke that direction, making it easier to determine where the cold air is seeping in.

Check your gutters

Gutter blockage of dead leaves and other muck can cause serious water damage. If they are clogged, hire a professional for a cleaning. If they are not clogged, check again after the leaves have fallen.

Rake up the leaves

Fallen leaves will deprive your grass of crucial sunlight. Wet leaves can also lead to mold growth and are a breeding ground for pests.

R.Nichols candles add charm to any room

You don't need a room makeover or shining new furniture to love hanging out in your home.

Statement heels

Designer interview.
Gianvito Rossi on working with his dad, Sergio, and upping a woman's sex appeal.

Italian-born shoe designer Gianvito Rossi grew up surrounded by women's shoes. Learning the ropes from his father — Sergio Rossi, who he worked under for a decade — Gianvito used his inherited and honed skills to launch his own label back in 2007. Built on luxury, he has since become a regular fixture on the Milan Fashion Week schedule, scoring worldwide acclaim and attracting the attention of international buyers. His sexy stilettos have been featured in the likes of "The New Yorker," stocked in Barneys New York and coveted by a lengthy string of stylish names, including Natalie Joos and Leandra Medine. They are having a major moment. We caught up with the designer — who just returned from Asia — to get a greater understanding of how his creative process unfolds.

"I work for my visual pleasure," says Rossi. / PROVIDED

What was the biggest lesson you learned from your father?
There is always a way to make things better, and you should never stop looking for that.

Tell us about the first women's shoe you can remember.
It is very difficult to say, I really grew up among them.

Who or what inspires you?
My travels, people — but more generally, the images you see that subconsciously fuel your imagination.

Finish this sentence: "A woman in heels is ... " Dangerous.

When you design, who gets to test out your creations?
The girls in the design team try them. It is fun!

Do you feel wearability or practicality ever hold you back creatively?
Yes. It is very easy to design new and strong styles, but it is only with the filter of these aspects you can do a quality design.

What excites you more: the pencil-to-paper process or the arrival of the finished product?
Drawing is a growing conceptual excitement, but when you get the finished shoe is a more physical, special moment.

Do you consider yourself to be led by the trends?
Trends are obviously considered while designing, but most of the time I discard some ideas when they are too evident.

Some of your shoes are ultra-sexy. How do you capture sex appeal in a shoe design?
I always try to design a shoe that exalts a woman's natural sex appeal in a way I would be personally attracted by. I actually work for my visual pleasure!

Acer unveils 6-inch Liquid S2 smartphone

Though IFA Berlin — the world's leading trade show for consumer electronics and home appliances — is only days away, the company Acer has decided to unveil its product lineup, starting with a huge smartphone called the Acer Liquid S2.

The device sports a monstrous 6-inch, 1920x1080 pixel screen, a 13-mega-pixel camera on the back and 16GB of storage memory.

Its claim to fame, though, is its advanced camera capabilities, starting with 4K video recording — Acer claims it's the first-ever smartphone with that feature.

The Acer Liquid S2 will become available toward the end of next month; exact pricing and availability has yet to be revealed.

KID STUFF?

Sidescroller

LAWRENCE BONK
LAWRENCE.BONK@METRO.US

Video games aren't just about beefy dudes holding impossibly sized guns. Sometimes, developers look to the young, or the young at heart, for inspiration. Here are two titles that are ostensibly for kids, but offer enough gaming challenge for the sad, cynical minds of grown-ups.

'Rayman Legends'

Systems: 360/PS3/Wii U
Maker: Ubisoft
• • • • •

Rayman is a platforming mascot character that dates back to 1995. It was a time of O.J. It was a time of really, really slow Internet. In 2011, developer Ubisoft brought back the appendage-lacking thingamabob in a beast of a sidescroller called "Rayman Origins." Now, the bizarre little dude is back in "Rayman Legends."

If you played "Origins," or any Mario title, you'll know what to expect here. It's side-scrolling action at its purest. You jump on enemies. You look for secrets. It's an expert rendition of a well-worn formula, plus the cartoony graphics are simply stunning — like, call your ex-wife and try to get back together stunning. There are a variety of level types but some go on a bit too long. Luckily, there is also four-player co-op.

'Disney Infinity'

Systems: 360/PS3/Wii U
Maker: Disney Interactive Studios
• • • • •

Are you obsessed with Disney and its many properties? Do you love spending money? Then, boy, do we have the game for you. Disney Infinity lets you play, and create, in any of its myriad worlds. This includes Pixar flicks and even, inexplicably, the recent "Lone Ranger" movie. What are the games like? They vary. For instance, "Pirates of the Caribbean" is an "Uncharted"-like adventure. "The Incredibles" suggests a kid-friendly "Grand Theft Auto." They are all extremely well done. The hook? Each character and world is only unlocked by buying a related action figure (although the game comes with three).

This truly is an astounding achievement, albeit an incredibly expensive one. As of this writing, buying up all of the playsets so you can truly experience every nook and cranny of the game will set you back $250.

"Rayman Legends" includes eye-popping visuals such as this one. / UBISOFT

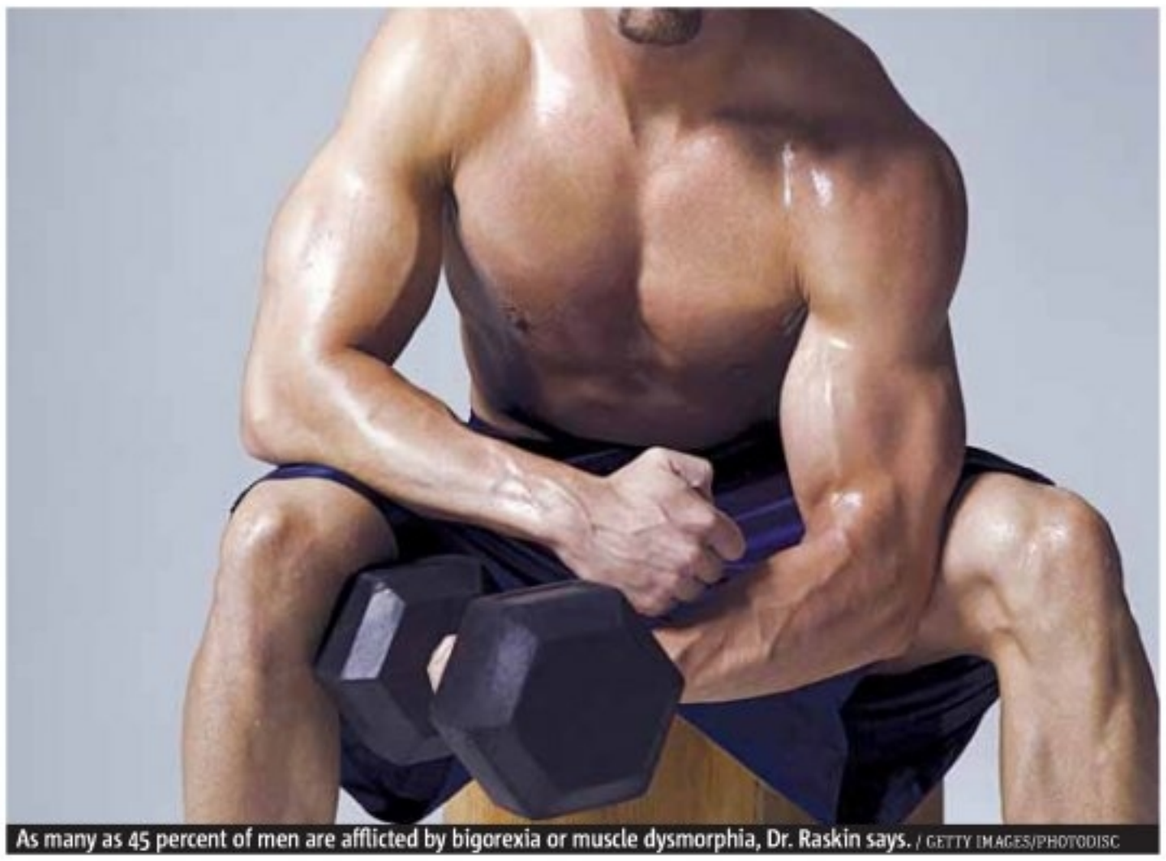
Is a guy in your life 'bigorexic'?

Health. Body dysmorphic disorder doesn't just hit women.



As many as 45 percent of men are afflicted by bigorexia or muscle dysmorphia, Dr. Raskin says. / GETTY IMAGES/PHOTODISC

Nicknamed "bigorexia," obsessive muscle mass bulking can damage mental and physical well-being, especially when it involves dangerous drug use.

"'Bigorexia' is the term we're using for men who are using substances like anabolic steroids and testosterone to get bigger and bigger," says Dr. Damon Raskin, an internist with a specialty in men's health. "The danger with taking supplemental testosterone is that it shuts off the body's ability to make it." Depression and liver problems are potential side effects. "There can also be changes in personality, including excessive aggression, breast enlargement and acne," he adds.

Similar to anorexia, bigorexia often affects teens who are prone to insecurity.

"They see these athletes using enhancement drugs and they think it's OK," says Dr. Raskin, who thinks efforts to educate people about the disorder need to start in schools. A healthy home life helps too. "The person who is susceptible is someone who perhaps has a stressful home environment, low self-esteem or [has] been rejected by a girl or boy," he says.

Warning signs include increased aggression and overdoing diet and exercise. "If you see rapid physical changes and someone develops massive biceps in four to six weeks, that's not normal," says Dr. Raskin.

As with any drug dependency and psychological disorder, it's important to seek professional help. "It's necessary to get therapy to find the underlying problems and treat them," the doctor advises. "Then, we work to balance out hormones."

LINDA CLARKE

Protein pointers

No drugs, no problem?

Even bigorexics who don't use drugs are prone to health problems from excessive exercise and consuming too much protein (found in meat, eggs and protein supplements).

"Overexercising can damage joints, especially in teens when bones aren't fully formed," Dr. Raskin says. "Eating lots of protein causes kidney damage and kidney stones."

For anyone trying to bulk up, take precautions. Dr. Raskin advises: "Bodybuilding should be done under careful supervision."

Recipe. Buffalo Chicken with Blue Cheese Dip

This delectable dish is perfect for a bar-like meal at home or an appetizer you can share with friends while watching the big game. Instead of frying, I bake these "wings" in the oven and toss them in an incredibly tasty (and spicy) sauce. Plus, the smooth blue cheese dipping sauce balances out the heat. Go on, you know you want to give these a shot!

1 Preheat oven to 375. Coat a baking dish with oil spray and set aside.

2 Mix the hot sauce, paprika and ground red pepper in a bowl. Coat each tenderloin on both sides with the sauce and set in the prepared baking dish in a single layer. Bake uncovered in the oven for 15 minutes, or until the chicken is no longer pink inside.

3 While the chicken is cooking, mix the ingredients for the dip together until velvety smooth.

Ingredients

Buffalo chicken:

- 2 pounds chicken breast tenders (boneless, skinless)
- ½ cup hot sauce (like Frank's Red Hot)
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- ½ teaspoon ground red pepper (cayenne)

Creamy blue cheese dip:

- 5 ounces 0 percent plain Greek yogurt
- ¼ cup crumbled blue cheese
- Ground black pepper to taste
- ¼ teaspoon garlic powder (more to taste if needed)
- ¼ teaspoon onion powder (more to taste if needed)

Makes eight servings
Cost (per serving): $1.39
Cooking time: 20 minutes
Calories (per serving): 175

Recipe. Black Bean & Salsa Spud

Including more plant-based meals in your repertoire is proven to be good for your wallet, the environment and your body. Add this tasty spud to your list of simple recipes that can be whipped up in a flash.

1 Wash the potatoes well, and prick several times with a fork. Place on a microwave-safe plate and cook on high for five minutes. Then turn over and cook an additional five minutes. While potatoes are "baking," rinse and drain the black beans and saute with the salsa, garlic powder, Dijon mustard and cumin. Spoon the mixture over the spud and enjoy!

Ingredients

- 4 potatoes
- 1 can black beans
- 1 jar mild/medium salsa
- ½ tsp garlic powder
- 1 tsp Dijon mustard
- ½ tsp ground cumin

Makes four servings.
Cost (per serving): $1.18
Cooking time: 15 minutes
Calories (per serving): 275

Recipe. Breakfast Smoothie

Everyone needs a go-to smoothie recipe and, in my opinion, this is one of the easiest and yummiest. When my kids were little, I called it a "breakfast milkshake" and they thought I was the coolest mom in the world. And now that they're older, they regularly toss it together for a morning meal or an after school snack.

1 Blend ingredients together in a blender until smooth and frothy. Drink up!

Ingredients

- ½ cup nonfat yogurt
- ½ cup skim milk
- ½ banana
- 1 cup frozen mixed berries
- 3-5 ice cubes

Makes 1 serving
Cost: $1.38
Cooking time: 5 minutes
Calories: 215

Look of the Month – No Heat Styling

This month's tutorial teaches you how to style your hair without using any hot tools. It's good to take a break once and awhile from blow drying, straightening & curling, but not all of us are blessed with beachy waves and can just wash & go! This stylish and put together look is easy to do at home, and will be sure to get tons of compliments. It's also perfect if you are just coming from the gym and don't have time to dry your hair. Below, Natalie of our Davis Square location will walk you through how to achieve this look at home. Make sure you stop by your local Dellaria Salon for all of the best Framesi hair care products!

The tools you will need for this look are:

- Hair elastics
- Bobby pins
- Framesi's IDENTITY X-twist
- Framesi's BY Glacé
- Framesi's BY light mist finishing spray

Start with towel dried hair, making sure to squeeze out any excess moisture. Apply

Framesi's IDENTITY X-Twist, which will smooth the hair and protect from frizz, and comb through the hair.

Taking a two- inch wide section from the hairline back to crown of head, begin braid. Start with a standard braid and as you work towards the back of the head, switch to a French braid and add hair to each strand until you reach the crown.

Next, gather the remaining hair, smoothing any bumps along the way, and pull into a high ponytail at base of the braid. Smooth the sides close to your scalp, spraying any flyaways with Framesi BY light mist finishing hairspray. Add a nickel sized amount of Framesi's BY Glace to the pony tail, combing through.

Take the pony tail in your hand and, holding it upwards, twist it in a clockwise direction. Wrap the ponytail into a small, smooth bun, and pin in place at the base with bobby pins, making sure none of them show. (Tip for blondes, buy silver or lighter colored bobby pins so they are less visible!)

Finally, lightly tug the braid upwards to create volume, and finish the look with BY Light Mist Finishing Spray.

Brought to you by the professionals at Dellaria Salons.

With twenty-five locations across New England, Dellaria Salons has been a leader in the beauty industry for over fifty years, and provides all of it's clients with the convenience of quality professional products & superior styling techniques.

(Featuring tips by Natalie S of our Davis Square Dellaria Salon)

Natalie S. has been a stylist in the Boston area for the past 6 years and recently joined the Dellaria team in their Davis Sq. location. Since coming to Dellaria, Natalie has enjoyed amazing learning opportunities from truly talented stylists.

She loves working in the up-beat, fast-paced energy of Davis Square in Somerville "My favorite part of working in this salon is always having someone new and exciting in my chair!" She is looking forward to many more amazing opportunities that come with working with Dellaria Salons.

A picture's only worth a thousand words if they're in English

Last I heard, English was the language of America. If Metro wants to print a paper in another language, that's your First Amendment right, but please print MY morning paper in English. Also, in regards to the mess in Syria, by using chemical weapons, the Syrians have, in fact, threatened the entire world with the increased potential that someone else will use them! I do not believe it is America's place to respond. It should be immediate and international.

MARK NOBLE, VIA EMAIL

I was not happy with the front page of today's Metro in Spanish; I almost threw it away until I realized it was just the front page. What was the reasoning behind that? I thought in the good old U.S. we should be speaking English first and other languages second. Sad, very sad!

ELENA LAPORTE, VIA EMAIL

Metro's part of a good school education

I'm sending this to let you know I've been reading your paper ever since I was in kindergarten (don't worry, I'm only in seventh grade), and I feel that you deserve to know (as if you don't know already) that your paper is truly awesome! Whether it's reading all about the daily crime, keeping up and laughing with Dorothy Robinson, glimpsing at my horoscope or playing (or at least trying to) the crossword, Metro made the first five years of my school train ride enjoyable. Now I'm leaping into my second year of being home-schooled and I make every effort to get a paper before my day starts to know what goes on outside my doorstep.

Pats position preview: Wide receiver, tight end

NFL. Will the Patriots be able to sustain their offensive brilliance with so many unproven players?

Wes Welker is doing his thing with the Broncos. Aaron Hernandez is doing time in jail. Brandon Lloyd and Deion Branch are waiting for their phones to ring.

The Patriots receiving corps is much different — and somewhat of a question mark — going into the 2013 season.

First, the best news: Rob Gronkowski wasn't placed on the physically unable to perform list, which would have kept him out for at least the first six games of the season. After four surgeries on his arm and one surgery on his back, he's now practicing in pads with the team.

It's doubtful Gronkowski suits up for the Pats in the Sept. 8 opener against the Bills (1 p.m., CBS), but it wouldn't be a huge surprise to see him back on the playing field soon. For now, Bill Belichick calls his situation "day-to-day," as Gronk takes the steps necessary for a return.

Aside from the team's big free agent acquisition in slot receiver Danny Amendola, the Patriots' receivers are largely young and unproven. If Amendola can stay healthy — and that hasn't been easy for him over the years — he could put up Welker-like numbers, already seeming to have great chemistry with Tom Brady.

Even so, young receivers will have to step up to make up for the aforementioned key losses. Undrafted rookie Kenbrell Thompkins, out of Cincinnati, has proven to be capable. Thompkins finished the preseason with 15 receptions for 164 yards, and appeared to be Brady's favorite target — especially when Amendola was off the field.

He'll be joined on the roster by fellow rookie wide receivers Josh Boyce, out of Texas Christian, and Aaron Dobson, out of Marshall. Dobson's 6-foot-3 frame gives him a height advantage over some defensive backs — something Brady can certainly take advantage of.

"They're all anxious to get started," Patriots offensive coordinator Josh McDaniels said of the rookies. "We've already moved them and played multiple roles, multiple positions with them, which in our system is a really big plus for us to have some flexibility with those guys."

Julian Edelman and Matt Slater return for their fifth and sixth seasons, respectively.

One more undrafted rookie, tight end Zach Sudfeld, stood out on the offensive side of the ball in preseason. He looks to play the role of Hernandez and will see plenty of snaps with or without Gronkowski out there.
